The Norton Sound Health Corp. contracted BSNC subsidiary Inuit Services, Inc. and Neeser Construction Inc. to jointly build the hospital, which offers an enhanced and larger state-of-the-art health care facility for the region.

“I am proud that BSNC, in a joint venture with Neeser Construction, is helping to deliver a critical need to Norton Sound region residents through the successful construction of this ultramodern hospital,” said BSNC President and CEO Gail Schubert. “This project aligns well with our mission of helping to improve the quality of life of our people.”

Located near the 50-mile-wide Bering Strait between Russia and Alaska, Port Clarence is opportunely located for marine traffic traveling between the Arctic Ocean and Bering Sea. A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

By Gail R. Schubert, BSNC President and CEO

Spring is finally here, but many of our communities have been experiencing much cooler temperatures than normal, including late spring snowfalls and snowstorms. This makes it seem like it is already autumn, although that has not stopped our hunters from heading out to harvest migratory birds, caribou, reindeer and sea mammals to replenish our subsistence food supplies. Many BSNC shareholders and descendants have posted on Facebook how happy they are to eat fresh geese, ducks, seal, muktuk and ugruk. I am proud to see our next generation of hunters, such as Gage Ivanoff and Corwen Paniptchuk, return from hunting with a bountiful harvest that they share with their families and village elders. Subsistence has been our way of life for thousands of years, and will continue as our younger generations are taught to harvest the food sources that have sustained us for generations.

Management continues to evaluate whether it is feasible to resume mining at Rock Creek. The mining operation could provide not only jobs for our shareholders and descendants, but also significant profits to BSNC, based upon the engineering and financial studies prepared to date by our expert mining consultants. Although a decision has not yet been made on the future of the mine, questions have recently been raised by some shareholders and others about the mining operation and BSNC's potential financial benefit from mining. While the mining plan is complex, there are a couple of important facts that I would like to highlight. First, our mining team is committed to using a gravity-based system, much like a sluice box operation, to recover gold from the crushed ore and placer, and we have no plans to use cyanide. Using the gravity system will result in a lower recovery rate for gold and the financial net profit projections reflect that. In addition, studies prepared by our consultants, while not a guarantee, indicate that the operation could be very profitable for BSNC, assuming that costs are controlled. As the summer progresses, we should have a better idea as to whether larger scale mining will once again provide jobs and other economic development opportunities to our region.

Management has also continued to work on the transfer of Port Clarence to BSNC under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act. Port Clarence is a natural deep water port which is recognized to have strategic importance in the Arctic as offshore development moves ahead, and as marine traffic increases through the Bering Strait. We believe that Port Clarence will play a big role in BSNC's future growth and development. We have been in discussions with industry for more than a year concerning development concepts at Port Clarence, and are undertaking a study to evaluate the development opportunities that might be possible at the site. I am very excited about this opportunity for BSNC and believe that it will allow for sustained economic growth opportunities in the region for many years to come. At the same time, BSNC's priority is to assist our regional residents in efforts to ensure that our subsistence harvests are not impacted by the increased marine traffic through the Bering Strait.

This past winter, we were concerned about sequestration and the potential impact on our government contract work and revenues. Revenues from our government contract work still comprise more than 90 percent of BSNC's total revenues. While we have seen some impact on existing contracts, we have also brought in new work and have actually experienced an increase in our government contract revenues. We continue to work towards diversifying our revenue base to provide future financial stability for BSNC, and are excited about opportunities in our region such as mining and port development.

Management and the Board of BSNC wish everyone a safe and productive summer, and are hopeful that when it finally stops snowing and storming, the snow will quickly melt allowing for rapid growth of the plants and berries that we will eventually harvest for our subsistence needs.

Alberta Schenck Adams

HISTORICAL SPOTLIGHT

Alberta Schenck Adams was an Alaska Native woman from Nome who proved to be an early warrior for Alaska civil rights. One day in 1944 when she was 16 years old, she was fired from working as an usher in Nome's Dream Theatre after expressing her opposition to Jim Crow policies that forbade Alaska Native people and "Half-Breeds" from sitting in the "Whites Only" section.

Soon thereafter, she penned an essay about equality to The Nome Nugget. Shortly after the publication of her essay, she went on a date with a Caucasian Army Sergeant to the same theatre and took a seat next to him. The manager ordered her to move to the Alaska Native section of the theatre. After refusing, she was forcibly evicted and arrested.

After her arrest, she wrote a letter describing her experience to then-governor Ernest Gruening, who proceeded to push the Alaska Discrimination Act of 1945 through the Alaska Legislature a full 19 years before the Civil Rights Act of 1964 was enacted by the U.S. Congress. BSNC honors Alberta for her early fight for our civil rights!

BSNC ANNOUNCES NEW SECONDARY LOGO

BSNC is pleased to announce that we now have a new secondary logo! This new logo will be used on our websites, social media and marketing material. A sticker of this new logo will be included in the shareholder proxy packets that will be mailed out with the annual report.

On the new secondary logo is a “Qargi”, the traditional community house of Inupiat and Yup’ik societies in western and northwest Alaska. It is a place where cooperative efforts for hunting are planned, guests are welcomed and fed, and the tools for a life on the land are constructed and repaired. This is where culture is celebrated through traditional songs and dance.

The new BSNC logo was designed in-house and is easier to reproduce for many mediums, including social media, advertisements, apparel and print. The classic ribbon logo that has been used by the company for years will continue as the official corporate logo.

BSNC ANNOUNCES “YOUNG PROVIDERS AWARD”

This award is for a young person who perpetuates Alaska Native culture and a positive lifestyle not by measure of their academic or financial success, but by caring for family through subsistence activities, Elder care, or mentoring of young people in traditional activities and values and education.

BSNC congratulates the Unalakleet's boys and girls Wolfpack and Nome's boys basketball teams on each placing 4th at the ASAA March Madness Alaska 2013 Basketball State Championships. Way to go, UNK Wolfpack! Girls' basketball teams from Golovin, Nome, Shishmaref and boys' teams from Golovin, Nome, Stebbins also played good games and demonstrated great sportsmanship. Cheers to all participating teams!

port to help protect the Nation's strategic interests.

In 1976, BSNC selected the Port Clarence lands, which feature a natural deep-water port, for conveyance should the land become available. BSNC staff have made it a priority to receive title, regardless of the transfer's complexity or legal and regulatory obstacles encountered.

The increase in marine traffic through the Northwest Passage in recent years has placed Port Clarence in the center of an area in need of safety and shipping infrastructure. Port Clarence is the only port of refuge along the coast with water that is deep enough to shelter commercial and military vessels. The infrastructure already present on-site could be expanded to provide a greater ability to respond to marine incidents and fuel spills. There is also an industry demand to develop a facility that would serve as a staging area for oil and gas exploration in the Chukchi and Beaufort Seas.

INTERN SUCCESS STORY New graduate Naomi Brunette succeeds with support from BSF

Naomi Brunette of Nome graduated from Fort Lewis College in Durango, Colo. in April with a bachelor's degree in U.S. History and a minor in Coaching. Her parents are Kenny and Rosali Brunette and her grandparents are the late Rev. Timothy and Anna Gologergen.

This spring Ms. Brunette wrote BSF: "While attending college I was a recipient of the Bering Straits Foundation scholarship, along with other scholarships from organizations within the Bering Straits region. The BSF scholarship provided the financial support I needed to stay in school and earn my degree. In addition, I was able to complete an internship at the Anchorage Bering Straits Native Corporation office. The internship allowed me to foster new personal and professional skills.

The BSF scholarship, and other scholarship programs from within the region, offer much more than financial assistance to college students. Students from this region are extremely fortunate to have the support and resources made available by scholarship programs. I encourage all future college-bound students to take advantage of such an amazing support system."

Since graduation, Ms. Brunette returned to Nome where she works as the tribal youth services specialist for the Nome Eskimo Community.
